We, the editors, present to you your yearbook, the 1957 Scarlet Feather, On the following pages, through pictures, there is an attempt to tell, in part, the story of your school life. As you turn the pages of this book, may these pictures and this story remind you of the many happy moments you have spent here at Central.

Years from now, when you glance through this book, may you recall these incidents with pleasure and relive these enjoyable hours of your story.

Nestled by the Mississippi,
At the widening of the river
Which becomes lovely Lake Pepin
Jewel of the northern necklace,
Diamond studded, lake-laced Northwest.

Here, where foreign culture rooted.
Here, where freedom's flower fruited.
Here, where farms and progress flourished,
By ambitious free-men nourished.
Grows our city, pretty Red Wing.

Immortalized in song and story,
Stalwart youth adds to the glory,
Of her institutes of learning,
Of her shrines, with faith, bright-burning
Freedom's anvil, pretty Red Wing.

Central Building.

Long before war-cries subsided
Our first school had been provided,
And as Red Wing's dreams came true
Our education system grew-
Until, pictured here, you see
Central High's entirety.

Heart of Red Wing, hall of learning
Keeps the light of progress burning.
For to study is to know-
And to learn is but to grow.
Here the anvil shapes the youth
In the mold of fact and truth.

Administration and Faculty

Administration

Dr. Clarence Wasmund, Wayne Loomis, Dr. Gordon Lee, Glen Featherstone, William D. Sweasy, Mrs. M. H. Harris, Dwight E. Gustafson.

Board of Education

The seven board members now represent all school districts, including Red Wing and all the adjoining rural districts that have been added in the recent consolidation movement. This movement has added to the property valuation of the area that these board members represent. The projects for this year included administration regulations for the elementary schools and developing a better high school curriculum.

L. M. Wikre

Superintendent L. M. Wikre

Having completed his seventh year as superintendent of schools in Red Wing, L. M. Wikre has carried out the important duties of his office such as advising the board, developing the curriculum and setting up standards for the public schools of Red Wing.

This year Mr. Wikre's principal problem was that of working out a sufficient building program to accommodate the growing elementary school population.

L. M. Anderson

Principal

L. W. Anderson

As the enrollment at Central increases, so do the duties of the administrators. The numerous tasks that make up Principal Leo Anderson's program are no exception. Unknown to most students is his work on problems of administering the school, general supervision of the high school curriculum, and maintaining the rules and regulations of a smoothly operated school.

Assistant Principal

Miss M. E. Splittstoesser

Included among the many duties of Assistant Principal, M. E. Splittstoesser are assisting students in planning their schedules, conducting senior interviews and signing the numerous attendance slips which pass through her office every day. In addition to these services, her guidance and helpful solutions to student problems make our education easier and more emjoyable.

Miss M. E. Splittstoesser

Secretaries

Administrative

Secretaries

The efficient operation of the two administrative offices is the responsibility of the secretaries. Their competent work helps maintain a smoothly run administration all year round.

Faculty

Important in the story of your school life are the teachers you come in contact with everyday. These people have added much to your knowledge through their teaching skills. Their advice has developed an understanding that will be used in future years. Not only do these people show their patience in the classroom, but also their generosity by giving up their leisure hours to advise you in your club activities and chaperon you at various school functions.

Now as you look at these familiar and characteristic poses, may you recall these important people in your story.

Cafeteria Help

During the past year, we were provided with well-balanced, inexpensive meals. The people responsible for this are the women that helped in the cafeteria kitchen. Most of us saw their smiling faces everyday while standing in the ever so familiar, "lunch lines." Mrs. Ford, the cafeteria supervisor served students, but also served at several extra banquets for different outside organizations.

Custodians

A school is often judged by the cleanliness of its halls and rooms. This year, the custodians did the usual excellent job of maintaining a well kept school. When we get here in the morning, they have already started their tasks. One hardly ever sees these familiar men without a broom or some other cleaning device. As you leave at night, they still haven't completed their work.

James Dutcher, Gunnar Vindquist, Olaf Bernard, Harry Dorn, Ronald Chamberlain.

Gale Kull, Russell Swanson.

Engineers

There would have been some very chilly rooms in school this winter had it not been for Central's two engineers, Russel Swanson and Gale Kull. They operate the boilers in the basement of the Washington building, thus providing heat for the high school and Washington buildings.

Officers Gale Horts, Charlotte Otterson, Jakc Thompson, and Tom Wirth discuss Council projects with advisor Richard Lundquist.

The many projects of this year's Sr. Student Council have made a busy schedule for its members. The council met every Wednesday during the last half of alternating periods.

Included in their activities of the year was the organization of the homecoming program, codification of ethics committee rules, holding a mock election and encouraging better behavior at games and assemblies.

Apple sales, concessions and dances help balance the council's budget.

Ethics Committee

The student - helping - student idea aids the Ethic Committee in enforcing the regulations of Central High School and trying to eliminate the problems that might arise. Assisting the committee are ten students from each senior high class who are chosen each quarter to pass out tickets. The committee works in connection with the Senior Student Council.

ROW 1: Carolyn Wilson, Sue Hawley, Carol Burgess. ROW 2: Jeffrey Friese, Jill Kampf, Barbara Gard, Wyn Anderson.

One of the projects of the student council was a mock presidential election.

Junior Student Council

JR. STUDENT COUNCIL OFFICERS: Tim Loomis, John McLeod, Jill Kampf, and Bruce Geary gather for a post-meeting talk.

As the 1956—57 year has come to an end the Junior Student Council has completed a busy nine months. The organization is made up of junior high students and gives its members experience so that they may learn to be capable leaders in years to come.

With the help of their advisor, Maurice Wohler, the council has undertaken such projects as sponsoring the bicycle patrol, Posture Week, and the Dental program. They have also worked on a social program for junior high and have tried to raise money for the spring awards.

Senior Class of 1957

Throughout the years when a young person is passing from the bewilderment and excitement of youth into the depth of adulthood he is often to experience the glow of success and the dark overcast of failure, the sensing of a dream come true and of others being shattered into bits beyond former recognition, but above these he will gain the feeling of achievement as his former goals and ambitions are gradually attained. The attainment of these goals and ambitions is thankfully something which is barred from no one, for every individual whether he is a plumber, a merchant, a maid or a scholar is capable of giving that added shove which in his eyes will make him a success.

We, Central's seniors of 1957, will achieve one of our goals as we walk across the stage on commencement to receive that long awaited for diploma. To some students the receiving of this means long hours of hard work along with much enjoyment and satisfaction, while to others it means a grueling task which they are glad to have come to an end. Upon the receiving of our diplomas we will all go our various ways with different ideas and ambitions, some of these reaching high peaks while others will follow the lower grade. In this respect we as a class could be called the mixing pot for we are a mixture of various goals and aspirations. Some of us may become scientists while others may develop into machinists, but throughout this mixture of ideas has arisen a feeling towards class cooperation. It was through this feeling of cooperation that we were able to gain class achievements as well as our own individual goals.

When we began our new venture as bustling seventh graders things seemed a bit confusing such as the short five minutes between periods, the long hours of study and the giant textbooks, but it was not long before our shyness wore off. As we progressed through junior high our imprint was left in nearly every organization, for we've been seen in junior student council, GAA, and FHA, babysitters club, intramural sports and the various music organizations.

Upon enterng our first year of senior high as sophomores we realized that we were no longer treated as underclassmen, for we too had received various privileges, such as sitting downstairs at assemblies. When being elected to numerous offices we found we now had an opportunity to voice our opinions. As juniors, our will to work really showed forth as we presented our class production, The Great Big Doorstep, which led to our engineering of the junior-senior prom, complete with carnivals and carousels.

At last we became world knowing seniors who thought it was our duty to do everything but totally run the school. This, our last year as students of Central, was accompanied by athletic honors in football and basketball, average sized honor rolls, high scholastic awards, a victorious homecoming but one without a bonfire, gala dances and parties, and the addition of a tape recording machine for the speech department and a hi fi set for the choir.

The achievements which we have accomplished while students here at Central may not establish any all time records or receive any startling awards, for after all they were not accomplished by a group of genius's, but by a mixture of students, some of them brilliant with others being average, working together toward a common goal. These achievements are something which we can neither take with us or leave behind for they are not tangible things such as money, but they are the intangible things, the memories of the many events which we worked to produce that can never be forgotten.

Well underclassmen, basically we may be gone from Central for no longer will we be seen walking through its halls, eating in the cafeteria or attending the familiar Friday afternoon pepfests, but the imprints we have left behind, the new trophies in the lighted case, our marks in the office and our carvings on the study hall desks, may be seen daily throughout Central. It is then through these class achievements that Central will never actually forget, for at every play and concert at which our imprint can be seen we will once again be remembered.

Central's Foreign Exchange Student

Celia Johnson, foreign exchange student from England, began school here as a senior in September. Here she arranges her program with Principal Leo Anderson, and Assistant Principal M. E. Splittstoesser.

Pepfests provided a fascinating experience for a foreign visitor. "The spirit is good at the games," said Celia, "but why do they have to practice?"

Commercial subjects that Celia took were her favorites and learning typing was one of the most pleasant.

The task of the yearbook staff is producing from a few ideas and a very skimpy budget, the finished product, the 1957 Scarlet Feather. By means of pictures and words, the editors have attempted to capture some of the highlights of the school year. It has taken many hours of planning and work. Fixing the year's budget, laying out pages, writing copy, and setting up picture schedules were all part of the hectic procedure during the year. This routine was interrupted frequently with the constant eating session held by the editors.

The results of the work is this book. The editors and business manager, can look on their brain child with pride, and they not only have the book to remember, but also many happy sessions in 308 to recall.

Chieftain

ROW 1: J. Hayman, D. Anderson, S. Boxrud, J. Hubbard. ROW 2: C. Hinricks, E. Hawke, D. Oelkers, K. Baumann.

Amidst the mad rush of laying out original pages, writing copy and finding the right headline to fill up the alloted space, this year's Chieftain editors managed to produce twelve issues of the paper.

One of the horrors of the senior journalists was to come into room 308 to see the cubby holes filled with white slips. These were to inform the budding journalists that assignments were due. It was through the help of these students that the Chiettain was able to appear as often as it did.

One of the greatest ambitions of this year's editors was to produce issues of the Chieftain that were clear of mistakes. This aim was attained through careful reading of the inevitable page proofs that never seem to turn out the way they were supposed to.

A Band

Sharing an exciting week together in Canada on the bi-annual band trip was a summer of 1956 band activity, as well as the regular park concerts. Members came back to school refreshed and added enjoyment to football games by performing stimulating skits during half time. Zest was also added to pep fests all year long by the band.

Many parades including homecoming, were brightened up by the quick stepping A Band directed by Reynold Christensen. Highlight of the fall season was an invitation to play at the College of St. Olaf's Homecoming game.

A number of concerts were given during the year including the fall, Chritsmas, winter, and spring performances. In the spring, band members traveled to Northfield to take part in the Big Nine Music Festival.

The year 1957 proved to be a successful year for the high school band.

One of the most popular spots in school, on the opening day, was the second floor bulletin board, where students gathered to see whether his or her name was on the choir list. The fortunate ones whose name was under one of the four headings, immediately prepared for a year of choral singing.

The choir, band and freshman choir combined to present the annual fall band and choir concert, held November 15. The program was made up of classical music, Negro spirituals, and old standards.

Three years of planning was climaxed as director Carl Sutherland staged, "Christmas in Many Lands," the largest and most beautiful Christmas program ever presented by Central's music department. Joining the choir and band were the seventh, eighth, and ninth grade choruses.

Every seat in the choir room is now a grandstand seat for listening to the newest classical and semi-classical records. Making this possible was the purchase of a new hi-fi player with seven speakers. This phonograph and choir risers were purchased with the money made on previous operettas and concerts.

State Basketball Finalists

The Red Wing Wingers displayed their championship form all year in winning the Big Nine Championship, the District 14 Crown, the Region 4 title and placing second in the State High School tournament. Their season record was 22 wins and three losses. The losses were non-conference, vacation games. The Wingers were undefeated in retaining their Big Nine Crown with 10 wins, all by decisive margins.

Tournament play was climaxed by the 59-51 loss to Mpls. Roosevelt in the state finals. The Petrichmen in the state opener won from Rochester and then by displaying the best fast break ever seen in state tournaments, walloped Walnut Grove to advance to the finals.

Red Wing won the region title by downing previously undefeated Anoka and then snowed under St. Paul Murray in the finals. The Wingers fifth successive district 14 title was gained by defeats of Hastings, Alexander Remsey, West St. Paul, and South St. Paul.

B Squad Basketball Team.

The Red Wing Bees ended a final season with a record of twelve wins and three defeats. Perhaps one of the finest Wingers 'B' Squads that Coach Smith has had dropped only three games during the season, one defeat coming from the Minneapolis Edison 'A' Squad Reserves and the others from Winona and Austin.

The Winona defeat was avenged by a win on the home court later in the season. The squad boasted of some of the finest prospects for the coming years on the varsity teams.

Coach Smith is to be commended for his contributions to the varsity team by teaching his 'B' Squad fundamentals and giving an opportunity for competition to so many players.

Homecoming

Queen Mary Jo

As tension mounted in the audience, Fred Borgen, senior class president, stepped onto the stage and crowned Mary Jo Enevold Queen of the 1956 Homecoming festivities at the annual pep fest in the new auditorium. Queen Mary Jo and her attendants Sue Hawley and Ramona Johnson began their reign at the pep rally on the school playground in place of the traditional bonfire.

Then the big day was here at last. Hay racks and trucks were transformed into colorful floats and the spectacular Homecoming parade was presented. A triumphant football game followed that night with the Wingers downing the Albert Lea Tigers 33—0. During the half time performance by the high school band, a trailer with an immense artificial flower was brought out onto the field. While the band was playing the flower opened and with spotlights focused on it, Queen Mary Jo emerged. Climaxing the evening was the gala Homecoming dance held in the colorfully decorated old gym with Paul Storti's orchestra providing the music.

Float Winners

The float committee from the ninth grade homeroom 310 took top honors in the parade.

The second prize winner was tenth grade homeroom 203.

The third prize went to seventh grade homeroom 302.

Homecoming queen, Mary Jo Enevold, and her attendants Sue Hawley and Ramona Johnson wait for the parade to begin.

The speech class gives an imitation of Alfred Hitchcock's television program.

The queen and her attendants were chosen from the six girls above. Brooks, M. Enevold, S. Luzaich, H. Schendel, R. M. Johnson, S. Hawley.

Kiddie Dance

Sissy picked up Junior and away they went to the kiddie dance. At the high school gym they met all their playmates dressed in everything from flannel sleepers to Sunday best. Junior entered the pie eating contest and the peanut roll. Sissy showed her talent in the bubble gum blowing contest. After an evening of dancing and games the kiddies all agreed it was a sweet party.

Kiddie Dance participants take advantage of the occasion to apply their teeth to a little bubble gum.

The pie eating contest is always a favorite for those that like to eat pie the messy way.

Kiddies relive their early lives as they portray the kids they used to be.

"Be careful with that toothpick or you'll jab her in the eye."

"Come on boys, blow that peanut!"

FEATHER FROLIC ROYALTY, John MacLeod, Prince; Dick Johnson, King; Mary Pat Gosse, Queen; Brenda Anderson, Princess.

The 1957 Feather Frolic

The old gymnasium was again the setting for the annual midwinter Feather Frolic held on January 26. Approximately 800 persons jammed the decorated gym with its numerous carnival concessions. One of the most popular games was the "wet sponge throwing contest."

Dick Oelkers, emceed the program that started with the crowning of King Dick Johnson and Queen Mary Pat Gosse with John MacLeod and Brenda Anderson as their royal attendants. A vocal arrangement by six sophomore girls, a magician, the speech class skit, the Dixielanders and the senior chorus line of 36 girls followed. Climaxing this gala event was the dance under a mock roof of turquois and white streamers.

The senior girls chorus line protrays dolls as they execute steps to the "Syncopated Clock."

Basketbal stars are victims of sponge throwers.

Interested spectarors find much interest in concessions.

Excited supporters jam the king and queen concession as voting draws to an end.

Speech class portray hillbillies in a skit for the program.

Last minute instructions are given by Mr. Million.

The Remarkable Incident at Carson Corners

A shocking and true to life phenomenon was portrayed in the 1956 All Class Play, "The Remarkable Incident at Carson Corners." The death of a school boy resulting from a fall from the fire-escape set the theme of the play. Who was to blame for this unfortunate accident? The boy's friends intended to find out just who was at fault by constructing a trial. Numerous witnesses were called to the stand, including many prominent people in the town, and as the trial progressed, it was discovered that each of the witnesses had played a part in the accidental death of the boy. The play was realistically done and enjoyed by all who were in the audience.

The Children's Play

Enchanting Red Wing's children this year were members of Thespian troup 213 as they presented "The Elves and the Shoemaker." The three act fantasy centered around the financial plight of a shoemaker's family because of his absence due to war. Threatening to take over the little shoemaker's shop was the scheming landlord. However, three unselfish elves were able to discover their distress and relieve the situation with their magical powers. The Thespians were proud of the colorful costumes, decorative scenery and also the fact that they had again escorted their audience to the happy land of make-believe.

Diredtors, Dwight Gustafson and Sue Hawley meet with crew members Marion Fennie and Carolyn Wilson.

Elves, Judy Meyer, Gale Holst, and Tom Wirth.

The shoemaker and his family, Charlotte Otterson, Carol Burgess, and Carleton Akins.

Mary Beth Koester and Nancy Koplin.

The women of the village, Sharren McMullin, Nancy Maginnis, Joyce Hennings, Marilyn Nave, and Sharon Cummins.

The Curious Savage

"The Curious Savage" was presented as the junior class play. The theme of the play showed just how abnormal the outside world was in comparison to the world inside a home such as the "Cloisters." Believing their stepmother to be unfit to care for her great wealth, the children place her in this home. Her friends there provide much of the humor of the play as they prove that they are her only friends. As the play ends she is able to leave with both her happiness and money.

THE CAST. ROW 1: J. S. Anderson, Jonson, B. Pearson, K. Rundquist, N. Edblom, Moe. ROW 2: Reier, Sethre, T. Totushek, M. Koester, C. M. Akins, K. Haustein.

The Crucible

This year's contest entry was the trial scene taken from Arthur Miller's puritan thriller, "The Crucible." With district one act title in hand Central's Thespians went on to more fine performances. Presentations were made at the Big Nine Speech Festival as well as the District.

STUDENT DIRECTORS, Mary Beth Koester and George Moe.

THE CAST. ROW 1: Burgess, Brooks, E. Stary, S. Hawley. ROW 2: D. Gustafson, T. Wirth, J. F. Watson, C. M. Akins.

Governor Danforth questions Elizabeth Proctor.

The trail scene.

The Fortune Teller

Colorful costumes, good music, and lively display of acting featured the choir's production of this years operetta, "The Fortune Teller," by Victor Herbert.

A lost royal-lottery ticket and the attempt to recover it provided the basis of the plot, much action, and the humor. When a band of gypsies appeared on the scene, a holiday of color also entered with all the vivid costumes and flashing jewelry. The beautiful and arousing music was well performed by the high school choir.

Livonia's secret police stand at attention.

The beautiful girls of the opera ballet admire the very lovely Irma.

Fresco joins with one of his ballet girls to do a little French dance.

Pete,
Have fun
this summer and don't do any thing we wouldn't
do. Kay M.

Pete,
I hope you have loads of fun this summer and don't do anything we wouldn't
do. Love
